CASTING BRIEF

Three men, early to mid 20's

These are typical Irish country lads. They're down-to-earth, lovable rogues and typical GAA boys. They're always up for the craic...whether it's raving three days into a festival or just going for a drive around town.

When they're together, they're at their best. They vary in their levels of confidence....but as a group, they feel strong.

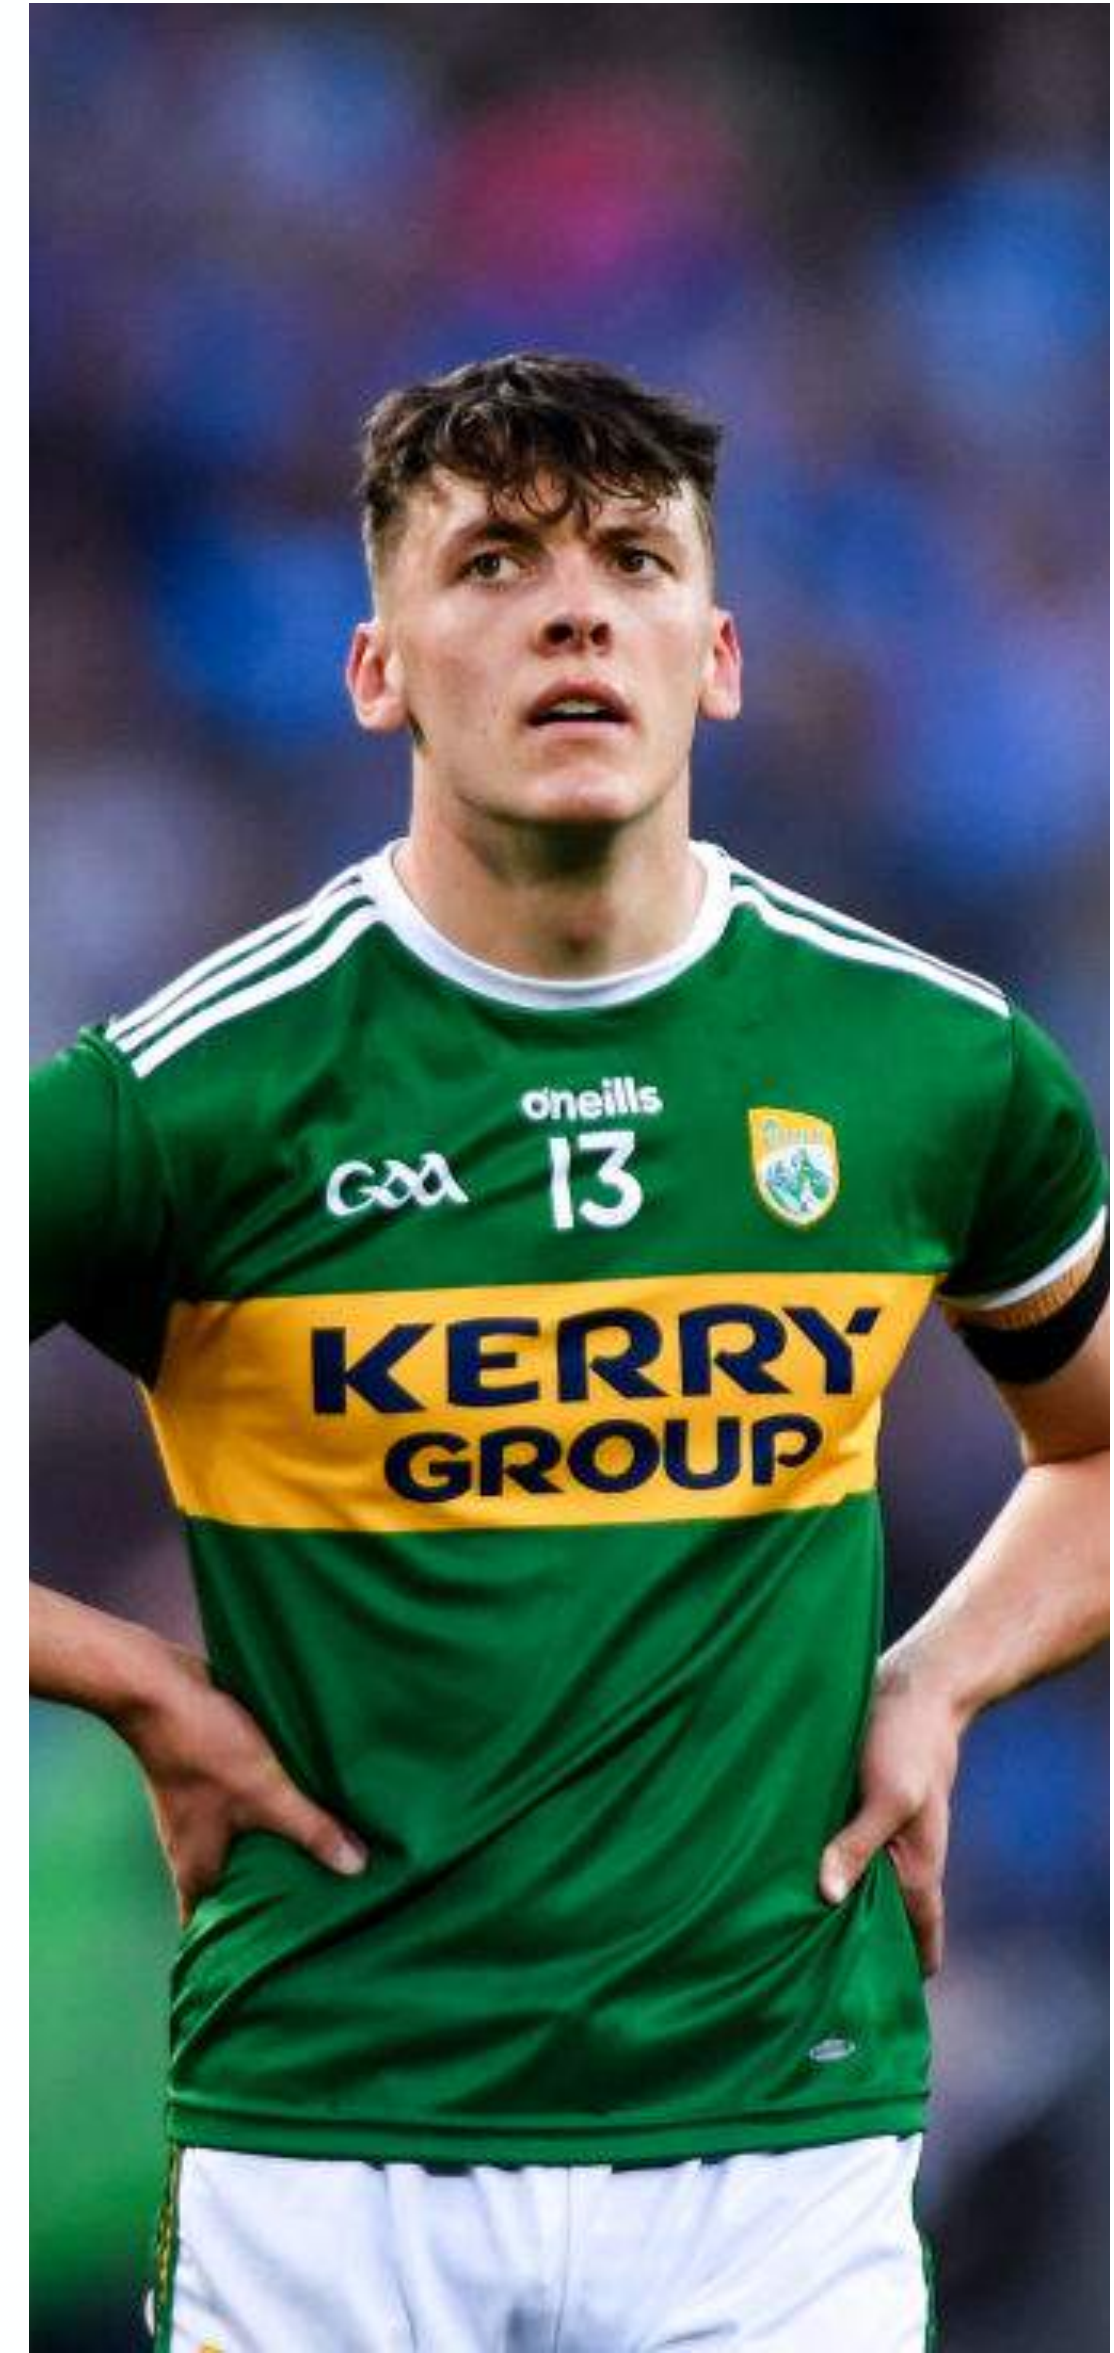

They're carefree, but not ignorant or inconsiderate. More in a happy-go-lucky sense. They value authentic experiences over material goods.

They're tall, bulky lads. Despite the scenario we see them in in this film, they take good care of themselves and are in good shape. They have classic country lads' haircuts.

Their Relationship

Though they find it hard to express in words, they have a lot of love for each other. They've been friends since secondary school; their bond is strong. They're loyal towards one another and trust each other completely. They'd slag each other off face to face but would fiercely defend each other if anyone of the group was threatened.

They're very comfortable together and can easily spend long periods in silence, just chilling.
